CROP REPORT SUMMARY FROM THE STATE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE

CORN CROP BETTER LAST YEAR 17.9 PER CENT AND COTTON CROP BETTER 11.5 PER CENT OVER THIS YEAR AT THIS DATE

Guthrie, Okla., Sept. 1.—The Oklahoma State Board of Agriculture finds from the report of its township correspondents that on August 25 the growing condition of corn was 55.7 per cent as compared with 64.4 per cent last month and 90.0 per cent for the month ending June 25, showing a decrease as compared with last month of 8.7 per cent. The growing condition of corn on the same date last year 73.6 per cent, a difference in favor of the crop last year at this date of 17.9 per cent.

The growing condition of cotton on August 25 was 58.2 per cent as compared with 75.3 per cent last month, or a decrease of 17.1 per cent. The same date last year was 69.7 per cent, or a difference in favor of the crop of 1908 of 11.5 per cent.

The growing condition of cowpeas is 57.0 per cent as compared with 87.4 per cent a year ago, showing the condition for 1908 to be 30.4 per cent above that for this year.

The growing condition of broom corn on August 25 was 49.1 per cent as compared with 74.0 per cent last month, or a decrease of 24.9 per cent in 30 days. The growing condition of broom corn on this date last year was 75.8 per cent.

The growing condition of Kaffir corn on August 25 was 55.7 per cent as compared with 81.5 per cent a year ago.

The growing condition of Milo Maize was 63.4 per cent as compared with 83.4 per cent last year.

The growing condition of spring sown Alfalfa on August 25 was 45.2 per cent as compared with 63.1 per cent last month, or a decrease of 17.9 per cent. The growing condition of spring sown Alfalfa last year for this date was 73.0 per cent. Fall-sown alfalfa is shown to have a condition of 54.5 per cent as compared with 73.1 per cent last month, and 94.2 per cent one year ago. The difference between the growing condition of spring and fall-sown alfalfa on July 25 was 10.0 per cent in favor of the fall-sown alfalfa. The difference between spring and fall-sown alfalfa on August 25 is but 9.3 per cent, showing a relatively greater decrease for fall-sown alfalfa during the past 30 days. Fall-sown alfalfa decreased 18.6 per cent and spring sown 17.9 per cent.

That proportion of native meadow cut hay is shown to be 62.3 per cent as compared with 68.0 per cent last year.

The general condition throughout the state have been exceedingly unfavorable to the growth of our staple crops. All crops have suffered from the extreme drought and intense heat. The condition of corn has decreased 8.7 per cent, cotton 17.1 per cent, broom corn 24.9 per cent, spring-sown alfalfa 17.9 per cent and fall sown alfalfa 18.6 per cent, showing the greatest deterioration in the crop of broom corn. Notwithstanding the fact that the condition of the fodder crops, such as cowpeas, kaffir and milo, have a relatively higher percent of growing condition than corn or cotton, their deterioration for the past 30 days has been greater than that of either corn or cotton. The greatest damage to corn appears to have been accomplished during the month ending July 25, when the condition dropped 25.6 per cent as compared with 8.7 per cent during the past 30 days. Cotton on the other hand, decreased but 5.4 per cent for the month ending July 25 as compared with 17.1 per cent for the month ending August 25.

The general remarks from our correspondents indicate that in many sections of the state the growth of the cotton plants has almost ceased, and the plants have begun shedding. Many sections report premature opening of bolls, due to continued drought. Cotton has already been placed upon the market in this state, and the grades are showing very low for the first picking, evidently due to immaturity and short staple. Corn already gathered is showing lack of development, and is very light.

Subject for Tonight.

Bro. Sid Williams will preach this evening on "The Judgment." Services will be conducted out in the open air. Every body invited.

DESPITE THE MUD AND DARKNESS

A LARGE CONGREGATION GREETED REV. SID WILLIAMS, WHO DELIVERED A MESSAGE TO CRIME STAINED MAN.

Accept You Confess Your Crimes Before God, You Shall Be Accused Here and Hereafter.

The mud and threatened inclement weather, supported by the night of the day before the first of the month when preparation is due to be made for the bill collector and bill collecting were not sufficient to reduce attendance on the revival meeting less than a large audience last night. The Baptist church building was filled to overflowing and a large number remained seated in the tabernacle and in vehicles immediately on the outside.

Rev. Sid Williams, as usual commanded the closest and most respectful attention from his auditors.

The general trend of the latter half of his sermon related to the necessity of men confessing their sins, and the peace and satisfaction of the life of the christian over the sinner, whose conscience tormented and left him without the light and joy of peace in his countenance.

By a series of very forceful illustrations he indicated the manner in which a sinner may acquire the religious habilitments.

The preacher talked a good deal last night about the wrecking conscience of the man who had committed crime.

He warned such men of the Ada community if they would secure relief from wretched hauntings through life and an escape from Hell after death that the one lone avenue of escape was the confession of their crimes before God and the acceptance of his saving power.

By the relation of several incidents, he vividly portrayed the utter impossibility of the man with uneasy conscience withholding the knowledge of his sins from his fellow man.

Today's Service.

And there was an unusually good service at 10 a. m. Brother Williams read for his text: "I go to prepare a place for you and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also."

The evangelist said that when Christ returns to the world, he is not coming back to save, but rather to judge the world and receive unto himself those who have believed. It is a mistaken idea that some people have that the Jews will believe upon his second coming. They will no more accept the Christ then, than they did at his first coming. He will come in reigning power and magnificent splendor.

He stated that there were no perfect churches because there were no perfect people, but the nearer people come to being like Jesus the less they say about it, but instead of proclaiming it aloud, they let their deeds prove their works, and let their light so shine as to constrain others to repentance. Christ is coming to receive his own, to gather unto himself his joint heirs. Some people endeavor to tell when the appearing will be. No one knows. Spurgeon says, "He will come in his own good time." After the most careful study of prophecy, and of the signs of the times we are unable to tell when Christ will come for the Word of God says He will come as a thief in the night. It is your business to be ready when he comes. If you are not ready, it is your fault. The state of Oklahoma is not to blame for the imprisonment of the boys in the county jail. They brought this condition upon themselves. Neither can sinners blame any one but themselves, when they hear their doom spoken at that awful day. It is an awful thing for a sinner to fall into the hands of God. God has furnished many avenues of escape for the sinner.

But oh, how different will the coming of Christ be to the Christian. Do you love his appearing? Here the evangelist spoke of the joys of the christian when they behold the splendors of the New Jerusalem, and when that beautiful city shall be opened up for the dwelling of God's people. The sinner and christian get two different view points of the coming of Christ.

Two men were looking at the sun. One compared the burning body to the consuming heat of hell, and the other thought the great heavenly body was like unto the brilliant rays of heavenly light, and a reflection of the brightness of the new Jerusalem. God's people see things different from those out of Christ. The coming of the Saviour of the world will give God's children an entrance into that city, where all is peace, joy and happiness, and where sorrow, sin, tears and death never come. Do you love the appearing of the Lord? Do you look forward to that time?

Lost Finger in Paper Cutter.

Hon. Fred Tucker, lately editor of the Konawa Chief-Leader, who has accepted the principalship of the Milburn schools, yesterday suffered the misfortune of having the index finger on his right hand cut off by a newspaper cutter.

The News sincerely sympathizes with Mr. Tucker. Besides being very bad, indeed, any way, it is wondered how a teacher could possibly get along without the index finger of his right hand.

Visitors From Stratford.

L. F. Tully and John Kelley are business visitors here today from Stratford. These gentlemen reported to the News that they were having a big meeting in their community at the Yeager school house, being conducted by Rev. C. Stetson, a Christian minister. There were three additions to the church last night. The meeting will continue through this week.

WOMAN LOGES 100 LBS. ACCOUNT OF MARRIAGE

MARTIAL SCALES RELATES THE SAD STORY OF A WEDDED LIFE.

Mrs. Scott Makes Sensational Allegations Against Husband—Sues for Divorce.

Weight Jan. 19, 1890.....184 lbs
Weight Aug. 31, 1909.....84 lbs.

Difference100 lbs.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 1.—Ten years of married life with H. H. Scott, traveling salesman, is responsible for the above reduction in the weight of his wife, according to a divorce petition filed in the district court yesterday by Ella Scott, a brunette, who seeks to dissolve the marital ties existing between herself and her husband.

The divorce petition of Mrs. Scott seems with sensational allegations against the man she married at Sigourney, Ia., Jan. 19, 1899. The suit was filed yesterday morning.

Besides accusing her spouse of being an habitual drunkard the plaintiff says Mr. Scott has been guilty of most extreme cruelty, that she has been subjected to embarrassment by his actions in times of ill-health. Despite the fact that the defendant earns $125 per month, the petitioner says he has neglected to provide for her wants, although he possesses property valued at $2,500 of which she seeks an equitable division as well as the custody of their two children. Alimony of $50 is also asked by Mrs. Scott.

At Mrs. Galbraith's.

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Galbraith entertained several young people in honor of Florence Furman. The fascinating game of forty-two was indulged in from the hours of 4 till six, when the hostess served chilled watermelon to the following: Messrs. Hugh Biles, Clifford Hardin, Harmon Eney, Henry Marshall Furman; Misses Corrine Kice, Mattie Truitt, Emma Thompson, Olive Kice, Lillian Hodge, Bernice Hodge, Elizabeth Ingram.

Fine Advantage.

GRAIN CO. SUES FRISCO.

Stone and Maxey Who Represented Plaintiffs Awarded Favorable Verdict.

A case of more than usual interest in the county court was that of the Roff Grain Co. vs. the Frisco Ry. wherein the former sought to recover $392.32 damages alleged to have been done a car of potatoes in process of shipment by the defendant between Roff and Brownwood, Texas.

The case went to trial Monday and on yesterday the jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for the entire sum for which suit was brought, that of $391.32.

Messrs. Stone and Maxey represented the successful litigants.

DAKE-DEVILRY—ESCAPES IN THE DARKNESS.

Crew Compelled to Carry Bags of Coin Out of Express Cars—Plans Interrupted by Conductor, Who Is Shot in Hand—Bloodhounds on the Trail.

Lewistown, Pa., Aug. 31.—One of the most audacious and startling hold-ups of a railroad train in the East
for years occurred in the eastern slope of the Alleghany Mountains
early today when a lone highwayman
snapped a Pennsylvania railroad express train with a dynamite cartridge
and at the point of a revolver compelled the crew to carry thousands of dollars in coin and bullion from an express car to a spot in the wilderness.

When the conductor of the train
attempted to interfere with the robber's plans he was shot in the hand and the bold bandit succeeded in making good his escape. In the darkness, however, he mistook a bag containing 10,000 new Lincoln pennies for gold coin and staggered away with it, leaving the real gold bullion to be recovered by the rail-roaders.

When the news of the robbery
reached the railroad and express company officials they were deeply concerned at its boldness and immediately ordered every available detective from the East and West to the scene in an effort to capture the robber. Bloodhounds were also put on his track, but up to a late hour tonight no trace of the man had been found.

Supt. Preston and other officials of the middle division of the Pennsylvania railroad at the signal tower near the scene in order to make a thorough investigation of the crime
if possible. The general superintendent, and general manager of the Adams Express Company are also on the ground to assist in directing the search.

The looted train was made up of an engine, three express cars and two sleeping coaches filled with passengers. At about 1:30 a. m. it was traveling through Lewistown Narrows,
a wild and lonely mountain gorge
through which flows the Juniata river,
when suddenly a dynamite cartridge
exploded and the engine driver
brought the train to a standstill.
When he looked out to see what the trouble was he was confronted by a masked figure holding a revolver in either hand.

"Are there any mail cars on this train?" demanded the highway man.
"No," was the reply of the startled engineer.

The engine crew was then forced at the point of a gun to accompany the robber to the first express car.
Where the messenger was looking out sylvania Railroad have established to discover the cause of the sudden stopping of the train.

A revolver was pointed at the messenger's head, and threatening to blow up the car with dynamite, the robber forced the messengers of the two express cars and engine crews to carry all the gold and bullion stacked in the first car to the side of the track.

Conductor Poffenberger of Harrisburg, Pa., who came up while this work was being accomplished, was ordered back by the bandit, who emptied one of his revolvers at him.
One of the shots penetrating his head and the others grazing his body.

Despite the appearance of three passengers who had been awakened
by the shooting the robber calmly ordered the crew back on the train
and compelled them to steam away,
leaving the bullion beside the track.

It was recovered later by a posse sent on a special train. When the train was leaving he called out:
"Good-bye and good luck; I hope to see you again."

It was reported tonight that in addition to the missing pennies several thousand dollars in currency was missing, but the express company
officials refuse to announce the exact amount of their loss. No clew to the robber's identity has yet been discovered.

He is described as being about 5 feet 8 inches in height and was dressed in dark clothing and wore a slouch hat pulled well down over his eyes.
He had a slight foreign accent.

Agent Hamaker of Lewistown sent a safe to the scene of the robbery to receive six bags of pennies on which the seals had not been broken, but which had been cut open with a sharp knife to ascertain their contents and abandoned by the robber in disgust.

ORDINANCE NO. 181.

An Ordinance relating to Taxation in the City of Ada, Oklahoma, for the year nineteen hundred and nine.

Be It Ordained by the Mayor and Councilmen of the City of Ada:

Section 1. That an ad valorem tax of fifteen mills and sixty-eight hundreds of a mill on the dollar be and the same is hereby levied on all the taxable property in the City of Ada, Oklahoma, according to the tax assessment roll for the year nineteen hundred and nine to meet the current and other legal expenses of said
city for the current year, the same to be distributed to the various funds
of said city as follows:

To the Street and Bridge Fund .66
mills;

To the Fire and Water Fund 4.14
mills;

To the Contingent and Supply fund
.82 mills;

To the Street Lighting Fund 1.24
mills;

To the Salary Fund 2.82 mills;

To the Sinking Fund 6.00 mills;

Section 2.
Art. 1. That there be and is hereby levied a poll tax of one dollar per year upon all able bodied male persons residing in the city of Ada,
Oklahoma, between the ages of twenty-one and fifty years.

Art. 2.—That the city Clerk of the said City of Ada shall make and certify a list of those liable to pay said tax and deliver such list to the County Clerk of Pontotoc County, to be by him placed on the tax roll;
and after the year nineteen hundred and nine, the said list shall be delivered to said County Clerk within the time that other assessments are made and delivered according to law.

Art. 3. That the said poll tax as herein levied, when paid, shall be delivered to the City Treasurer of said City, and shall be by him applied to the Street and Bridge Fund.

Section 3.
That said Taxation shall be collected as the law provides.

Section 4.
That this Ordinance shall go into force and effect from and after its passage, approval and publication,
and the time required by law.

Passed by the Councilmen this 31st
day of August, 1909.

Approved by the Mayor this 31st
day of August, A. D., 1909.

From Guthrie Correspondent.

Guthrie, August 31.—Fear is expressed by many prominent republicans that when Dennis Flynn, Joe McNeal and Cash Cade start after the republican nomination for governor that they will be confronted with some very embarrassing questions.
Some farmers will ask them what means they will employ to make the banks and railroads pay their just share of taxes. When this crowd was in control during territorial days,
this class of property was almost exempt and as the aspirants above mentioned have all got rich from holding this kind of property and ever have shown a disposition to evade taxation, and as the constitution compels them to pay a just share of the taxes, people will be a little reticent about allowing them to assess themselves.

One distinguishing and fundamental difference between the republican and democratic parties is that the
the democrats are ever alert to discover short-comings in their officers and when irregularities are found are quick to correct, and if criminal, to punish the offenders. Witness the proceedings in Pottawatomie and several other counties. Democrats believe in cleaning their own houses,
on the other hand the republicans conceal every possible graft, deny its perpetration and whitewash the offenders. They minimize every error of their officers. These are fundamental differences. Both from an organization standpoint have their elements of weakness and strength. If you are independent, if you believe in demanding strict honesty and integrity on the part of officers; if you believe in criticising them for neglect or inefficiency, you are naturally

a democrat; if you are willing to accept the dictations of a boss; if you are willing to surrender your privilege of saying who shall be your officers, how long they shall serve and refrain from criticising on account of hurting the party, you are naturally a republican.

Insurance Commissioner McComb Won't Resign; Will Probably Stand for Re-election.

Acting Secretary of State Leo Meyer is daily receiving and distributing lots of the 1909 session laws, as printed by the Oklahoma Printing and Engraving company of Oklahoma City. The volume contains 692 pages, a double index, and a directory of all political and judicial officers and offices in state. It is printed on excellent paper and is well worth the 75 cents which the state charges to pay cost of publishing.

McComb Won't Resign.

"There is absolutely no foundation for such a rumor," stated Insurance Commissioner T. J. McComb today, relative to a rumor that he was contemplating resigning to accept the managership of a million dollar insurance company.

PRESIDENT BRILES

Addresses Several Hundred Men of Ada at First Baptist Church Sunday.

An audience of men comprising practically the seating capacity of the First Baptist church heard president Chas. H. Briles at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, when he delivered an address on the "Influence of Christianity on a Community."

Whether from the pulpit or forum, this address was probably well received as any ever delivered in the city. While as in topic, the address in utterance was distinctly religious, it was characterized throughout with an historical delineation of the birth and progress of the christian religion. He thought that Christ came at the psychological moment in the history of the world. Especial reference was made to that important, if not critical, period within the life of the religion of Jesus Christ when Martin Luther bore the fruits of the reformation. President Briles feelingly discussed the value of christian influence within the community, and what is more important, within the schools and colleges where the mind of the child largely receives its character as well as mental growth and where there is imparted the characteristics of its environments.

Mr. Briles, before he had concluded, spoke directly of the value of the Lord Jesus as a personal savior, and all he said was very effective and the audience was most visibly moved. It is true, his profession is not public speaking, and his remarks Sunday were practically without preparation, but the purity of his religious thought and the culture of his mind and the oratorical quality of his speech combined to afford a production which intensely interested those present.

THE GUEST BROS.

Substantial Ada Merchants Who Have Bright Prospect for Growth and Permanency.

The News calls its thousands of daily readers attention to the advertisement of Guest Bros. dry goods and clothing merchants beginning in this evening's issue.

resigning, and will not do so. I am not interested in any insurance company organized or in process of organization."

"You will be a candidate for re-election next year, then?" he was asked.

"Very probably, but I do not care to discuss that now. Time's too far ahead."

Another Bank Denationalized.

The seventy-seventh national bank to forfeit its national charter for the benefit of the state guaranty law, today applied to Bank Commissioner A. M. Young for a state license—the First National Bank of Ponca City, capital $25,000.

Two new banks were incorporated and authorized today. The Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Tahliha; capital $10,000; John J. Thomas, president; May Miller, vice president; James N. Ross, cashier. And the True State Bank of Prue, a new town on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, in Osage county; capital $10,000; N. Pruden, president; W. T. Leahy, vice president; J. H. Comer, cashier.

Splendid Screw Door Safe.

The new institution, the Merchants and Planters Bank of which Chas. H. Briles is president and B. H. Mason is cashier, received its splendid new safe this morning and is now being used as a depository for the cash in sight, of which there is reported a goodly amount.

This safe is the approved Ely-Norris manganese screw door burglar proof safe.

The building of the M. & P. bank has just been painted to a most substantial appearance and when it has installed its new fixtures, now expected every day, it will be a good looking as well as a substantial institution.

OKLAHOMA WILL REQUIRE 1500 CENSUS ENUMERATORS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31.—It was announced at the census bureau today that it would take 1500 enumerators to complete the census in Oklahoma next year. Ten years ago it required but 469 enumerators in both Oklahoma and Indian Territories. The enumerators will begin work April 15 next and in cities of over 5,000 population according to last census, work must be completed in fifteen days. In outside areas thirty days are allowed. Enumeration begins six weeks earlier this time than ten years ago. The enumerators will be appointed by the five census supervisors with the approval of the director of the census, Mr. Durand. It is estimated that it will require 65,000 enumerators and 330 supervisors to take the next census.

PUZZLE AMONG THE NATIONS

For Centuries Students Have Tried Without Success to Trace Origin of Basque People.

The Basque provinces lie in the north of Spain, and although for centuries students have tried to trace the real origin of the people and find a key to their language, they have failed to do so.

The race is a Catholic one, and their devotion to the Catholic faith is so firm that it is commonly said the devil gave them up as a hopeless object of his sinister attentions, simply because he could never understand or master their language.

All other known tongues spoken by the sons of men have been shown to possess a common origin, traceable to the Arabic and Semitic. But the Basque language has entirely resisted the philologist. In some aspects the vernacular shows traces of a Chinese admixture; in others it is clear that North American Indian terms are native to it. It also shows traces of barbaric languages spoken on the east coast of Africa.

The people themselves bear physiological traits found in those who speak the said tongues. The native name of Basqueland is Eskuara, and their motto is "Irurabat," or "three in one." Nor is their political structure anything like that of any known political body, though they belong, of course, to Spain.

Each Basque province is governed by a parliament composed of representatives—selected partly by election, partly by lot—among the householders of each country parish or town. Their laws are essentially peculiar to themselves, and are conceived on no known code, either by ancient or medieval times. They are the puzzle among nations, and number 500,000, all told.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Physical Culture in German Schools.

"Every public school in Germany has a gymnasium, and there are certain hours on certain days when physical culture of boys and girls of all classes and ages is gone through," said Prof. Volze, superintendent of physical culture in the public schools of Frankfurt, Germany. "The physical culture instructors are paid by the city, and the halls and apparatus are also maintained by the various communities."

"Physical culture in the public schools in Germany is just as regular and necessary as arithmetic or grammar. The welfare of the nation depends more on a strong and healthy citizenry than upon a highly educated one; still better, when the two qualities can be combined, and that is the principle of the German school system."

"Swimming is also taught in the public schools, and the pupils are compelled to take their turn in the swimming pool until they are proficient in the art of swimming."

A LUCKY STRATAGEM

By Florence Kingston Hoffman

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

Robinson stood at the first-floor window and gazed dejectedly into the street. Without a shining brass sign proclaimed the residence of John V. Robinson, D. D. S., but this, alas! was the only luminous thing in Robinson's prospect--introspective or otherwise.

He was a clever young fellow, and had graduated from the College of Dentistry with honors, but there it had ended. In a word, he hadn't got on, and the fact that it was really in no wise his fault didn't make the reality any easier to bear. He had left Hillcrest for New York feeling sure that a big place was likely to produce bigger results than a small one. Then there was Carrie! Carrie Marston and he had already been engaged for three long years. Altogether, he felt desperate, and as he gazed moodily forth his attention was suddenly arrested by the sight of a portly old gentleman who came leaping up the street as though he were sprinting on the track.

"Humph!" ejaculated Robinson. "Well, he can't keep up that gait long, for apoplexy will put a stop to his little game, whatever it may be," and then he almost lost his breath as the old gentleman bolted up his own doorstep, rang the bell furiously, and with an anxious look behind entered the vestibule, closing the door with a bang that shook the house.

Recollecting how long it usually took his landlady's maid of all work to answer the bell, and feeling sure that the emergency must be serious, Robinson ran to open the door, and the old gentleman, still panting from his recent exertions, bounded in with such haste that he narrowly escaped overturning Robinson into the umbrella stand.

"My dear sir--my dear doctor--let me see, what is the name?" apologized the visitor.

"Robinson," mildly supplemented the dentist, as he righted his equilibrium.

"Oh! indeed! to be sure, Dr. Robinson. Will you--that is to say, could you--examine my teeth without delay? The fact is I'm in something of a hurry."

"So I had noticed," Robinson was beginning, when remembering professional dignity, he went on: "Yes, sir, I think I can manage it, if you will kindly lay aside your coat and take the chair."

With a sigh of relief the old gentleman divested himself of his outer garments, and sank into the depths of the dental chair as though it represented to him a bed of ease rather than the throne of torture.

"My dear Dr. Robinson," the latter finally managed to articulate, "I feel I owe you an explanation, and I will endeavor to be as brief as possible."

"I am, I would have you to understand, a man of most exemplary habits, generally speaking, but we all--ah! have our moments of relaxation, and so I--oh! confound it, perhaps you know how it is yourself?" Robinson bowed, and his patient resumed:

"Last night I dined with some friends, and may perhaps have been a little inebriated in the amount of wine I drank. After dinner we went to the theater, where my friends procured a box; and later they prevailed upon me to go behind the curtains and make Miss Zaza Flashlight's acquaintance. All this, you will readily understand, was harmless in the extreme, but it was perhaps a trifle unwise of me to ask Miss Flashlight and several of her company to be my guests at supper after the play. We had a merry time, sir, a very merry time, though my recollections of the affair, beyond the fact that we all ate considerable and drank rather more, are, I may say, exceedingly hazy. I spent the night at a hotel, and awoke this morning with a terrible headache and the impression of having passed through a prolonged nightmare. Arriving at my office, I found among my letters this--ah--bombshell!" producing a note which he offered to Robinson, who read aloud as follows:

"Amos Whitehouse, Esq., 110 Broadway, New York City--My Beloved! After a night of feverish unrest--for how could I sleep with such happiness in view?--I awoke to remember I had promised you an answer by ten o'clock this morning. Yes, dearest, I will be your own money wife, and almost before you read this I will be at your office to arrange about dates, etc. Till then, your loving dave, Zaza."

As Robinson read the last words the old gentleman resumed in great agitation:

"When I tell you, my dear sir, that it was then 10:15, and that even as I looked from my second-floor office window I saw approaching a figure that I instantly recognized as Miss Flashlight's, you may imagine my feelings. I grabbed my hat and top-coat, and allowing her enough time to inquire her way to my office and take the elevator, I boarded the down-car and fled from the building just after the up-car started on its journey. I tore madly up the street" (Robinson smiled, remembering), "but just before I reached your door I glanced behind and saw her in hot pursuit. She was more than a block away, but even at that distance Miss Flashlight might be easily--ahem!--remarked."

"The rest you know. I took refuge here, but I realize only too well that within a very few minutes my hiding-place is bound to be discovered, and when I tell you, my dear sir, that my beloved wife, already twice widowed when I married her, is of a peculiarly jealous disposition, that I owe my yearly stipend of $50,000 to her generosity, and when, last of all, I remind you that this might mean not only a suit for breach of promise, but a charge of attempted bigamy, you will appreciate my desperate predicament, and if you can formulate any plan whereby I may escape from this critical situation, let me say that you may draw on me for one thousand--no, two thousand--dollars, and count, moreover, on my patronage for life."

Robinson's well-brushed hair fairly rose at this proposition, and like an inspiration came the recollection of sundry feminine garments at that moment hanging in his closet. Two nights before, when Mrs. Marston and Carrie had come up from Hillcrest to accompany him to the theater, they had been overtaken by so severe a storm that the latter had borrowed his mackintosh and a silk muffler for her head sooner than run any risk of spoiling her new hat and cloak.

With a mental photograph of his beloved's horrified countenance, Robinson set about collecting her properties.

Having persuaded Mr. Whitehouse to conceal his substantial proportions in Carrie's cherished cloak and then to resume the dental chair, he draped his nether limbs with a much beruffled silk table cover (presented him by Carrie as a Christmas gift), reflecting as he complacently surveyed the graceful folds which, flowing from the chair, so well simulated a skirt, that possibly he might have risen more rapidly to fortune as window draper for a department store than as a D.D.S. He then pulled a Japanese screen close behind the chair, thus completely concealing the head of his patient from anyone entering the outer room, at the same time placing Carrie's new hat in a conspicuous place upon the table. Hardly were these arrangements completed when the doorbell rang violently.

After a few loud words in the passage there was a clatter of high heels and the frou-frou of silken petticoats as a blond female of most engaging appearance pranced excitedly into the room and stood between the folding-doors, endeavoring to command attention.

"Madam," said Robinson, indignantly, "I must beg your withdrawal immediately. I am in the midst of a painful operation, and they should have informed you at the door that I could not be disturbed."

"Sir," said the lady, calming down somewhat under the influence of his imperative tones, "I must ask you to pardon this unwarrantable intrusion, but I am in great trouble. I am seeking for a very dear friend--I might add, my affianced husband, Mr. Whitehouse." (Here the patient's legs trembled so violently that Robinson in turn trembled for his draperies.) "I saw him enter a residence within this block, and am at present making what might almost be called a house-to-house search" (with a nervous laugh), "as my business with him is of a very pressing nature."

"You see plainly for yourself, madam," said Robinson, blandly, "that I am the only male occupant of these rooms, nor have I the pleasure of knowing the gentleman in question. The other apartments in this house being all rented to middle-aged ladies of highest respectability, I cannot encourage your further search, and once more must insist upon your withdrawing." With which ultimatum he firmly conducted the dashing blonde, now almost hysterical, to the outer door, turning a deaf ear to all her entreaties for assistance in tracing her truant lover.

Having seen her safely in the streets, he re-entered his rooms, carefully locking both doors, and rejoined the unhappy victim, who, minus cloak and table cover, sat mopping his wet brow.

"My friend," said he, "I may say, my very dear friend, I am forever yours to command, for you have rescued me from the most deucedly awkward scrape of my life. Even now, however, I cannot consider myself entirely out of danger, but must ask the shelter of your hospitable roof until evening, when, under cover of the darkness, I can safely depart in a cab."

So there all day he remained, and a busy one it proved for Robinson. First an inquiry was sent for a state-room on an ocean liner, sailing the following day. This soon brought an affirmative answer; and a second epistle was dispatched to Mrs. Whitehouse, in which her loving husband broke the joyful news and bade her get ready to accompany him, deploring the fact that a few last matters of great importance would require his attention and keep him from her side until the evening. Lastly, his partner was sent for, and as much information as seemed desirable confided to his keeping, and when at length the shades of evening descended upon the aforesaid dwelling, Mr. Amos Whitehouse (having first sent Robinson to reconnoitre) crept, a sadder and a wiser man, into the waiting cab.

As he wrung Robinson's hand in parting he said tremulously: "I shan't feel positively safe till I'm actually on the ocean, but again let me thank you from the bottom of my heart for your kindness. From this day forward you shall care for the teeth of every member of my family with whom I have a particle of influence, and meanwhile I beg you to accept this trifling expression of my eternal gratitude" (which was a check to the order of J. V. Robinson for $2,000).

"Truly," said Robinson, as the cab rolled away, and sinking into a chair he gazed, still half incredulous, at the check in his hand. "There is a tide in the affairs of men, which taken at the flood leads on to fortune."
